The Flandreau Santee Sioux Tribe (the “Tribe”), located in Flandreau, South Dakota, is seeking applicants for the part-time position of Associate Judge. The Associate Judge, under the direction of the Chief Judge, will be tasked with the responsibility of fulfilling the judicial role identified within the Tribe’s Constitution.

The Associate Judge will handle all adult criminal and juvenile delinquency matters for the Tribe. Applicants must pass a P.L. 101-630 compliant background check and a pre-employment drug and alcohol screening before employment.

TRIBAL PROFILE

The Tribe is comprised of descendants of the Mdewakantonwan Sioux, a member of the Isanti division of the original Great Sioux Nation. They referred to themselves as Dakota, which means “friend” or “ally” or specifically Wakpa Ipaksan which means “bend in the river”. The Dakota Sioux were historically domiciled in Minnesota and Wisconsin where they lived a semi-nomadic existence for many years. As the United States began to expand westward, the Dakota Sioux faced increasing pressure from white settlers. In 1851, the Isanti ceded their land and entered a reservation in 1851.

In 1862, the Santee revolted against reservation life. The Santee believed the government did not meet its treaty obligations. Further, white traders prevented the distribution of food and provisions to the Santee pursuant to their treaties with the United States. This uprising, led by Little Crow, was quickly downed by U.S. troops. Twelve hundred Indians, many who were innocent of any involvement in the uprising, surrendered to the United States. Over 306 Santee people were sentenced to death by a military tribunal. Following the grant of some pardons by President Lincoln, 38 were hung on December 26, 1862. The survivors who remained were sent to concentration camps (prisons) in Davenport, Iowa and Ft. Thompson, South Dakota.

In 1866, the Ft. Thompson and Davenport groups were re-united at Santee Agency at the mouth of the Niobrara in Nebraska. Approximately one-third of those converted to Christianity. In 1869, twenty-five families gave up the tribal rights and annuities afforded to the Santee Sioux to become citizens of the United States. The latter group left the reservation in Nebraska, and acquired homesteads along the Big Sioux River at an area that would become Flandreau, South Dakota.

In 1873, those members built their Presbyterian Church in what was to become Flandreau. Later that fall, were joined by fifteen additional Tribal families. To the present day, after approximately 142 years, this church is one of the oldest continually used churches in South Dakota. The graveyard memorializes many of those early Christian names taken on by the Tribal members who shared in the journey to Flandreau. As noted above, in 1934, the Flandreau Santee Sioux Tribe was formally organized and recognized under the authority of the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934.

The Tribe is governed by a seven-member Executive Committee whose members are elected by the Tribe. The Executive Committee has the authority to manage all economic affairs of the Tribe and to appropriate funds for public purposes. The Executive Committee appoints a non-voting Treasurer as its eighth member. The Tribal President serves as the administrative head of the tribal government and serves, along with the Tribe's other officers. The elected terms are staggered in years and candidates must live within the defined reservation to be elected.

The Tribe's headquarters are located in Flandreau, South Dakota which is located in Moody County. The total area of the Tribe's reservation is approximately 6,000 acres, of which approximately half is trust land and the other half is owned by the Tribe in fee simple. The total membership of the Tribe is approximately 760 members, of which approximately 320 live on the reservation.

Major economic activities occurring on the Tribe's reservation are buffalo ranching, farming, convenience stores, arts and handicrafts, short-term lending and a gaming resort and hotel. The Tribe's reservation offers many opportunities for hunting, and fishing.

The Flandreau reservation is a small community that offers many services to Tribal members. Royal River Casino and Hotel, First American Mart convenience store and gas station, Fitness Center, Tribal Court, Flandreau Health Clinic, Tribal Office, Department of Natural Resources, Tribal Road Maintenance, FSST Police Department, Grace Moore Elderly Center, FSST Housing Authority, and Prairie Junction Truck Stop on Interstate 29 just seven miles west of Flandreau. The City of Flandreau provides customary municipal services such as fire, police, parks and recreation, and waste disposal to which the Tribal contributes monetarily.

TRIBAL COURT

The Flandreau Santee Sioux Tribal Court is court of general jurisdiction established by Article IX of the Tribe's constitution. The Tribal Court also has an appellate court that handles appeals from the Tribal Court. There is a separation of power between the tribal judiciary and the tribal government body. The Tribal Court generally meets weekly and handles both criminal and civil matters. All of the judges of the Tribal Court are law trained and members in good standing of the Tribal Bar Association. The Court further employs a full-time clerk of courts.
